RESEARCH PROFILE

Education researcher and PhD applicant with research and applied experience in Bangladesh and the United Kingdom. Experienced in qualitative and mixed-methods research, disability-inclusive education, child-rights fieldwork and education policy. Second author of a peer-reviewed study on child labour and education policy in urban slums, published in 2026, with a further co-authored manuscript under review. My research focuses on how education policies and institutional practices shape access, participation and inclusive provision for marginalised learners in Bangladesh and other under-resourced contexts in the Global South.

Research interests: inclusive education and disability-responsive education policy; education policy implementation and inclusive practice in Bangladesh and the Global South; educational inequality, exclusion and access for marginalised learners.
